Description
After successfully logging in, no errors, I was redirected but not logged in. After this I clicked the login and was automatically redirected to the main page and not the login. I can't get to the login page now...

This is partially the old login bug. However, I think it happened because your browser still had the old elog html cached when you attempted to login (different base href tag now). Try closing the browser and clearing cache on the elog. I think this will fix it for good.
