Description
Though the wiki page provides some hints, it would be useful to have the API of fhicl-cpp documented.
This could use a suitable markup tool such as Doxygen.

We would like to discuss this at the stakeholders meeting, since this does entail a significant amount of effort from the point of view of both the tool choice and configuration for automatic use, and the documentation of the APIs in the chosen format. Please note that we do have the ongoing art workbook project, where you may find some of the information you seek.
